Judge Staples of Roanoke has been designated by Gov. Mann to hold the remainder of the term of court, and he, together with Attorney-General Samuel W. Williams, will arrive at Hillsville to morrow morning. The cause of to-day's assassinations dates back to last fall when a deputy sheriff arrested a nephew of Floyd Allen on a charge of illicit distilling. En route to jail Allen intercepted the sheriff and beat him into insensibility with the butt of a pistol and brass knuckles. Leaving the officer for dead he spirited the prisoner away and secreted him At the December term of court Judge Massie was informed that the officers feared to arrest Allen and the court then announced that he would have Allen brought to justice if he had to go out of the county to get men to arrest him. Friends of Judge Massie warned him then that his words were indiscreet and that his life was in jeopardy. Allen was never arrested, but furnished bond for his appearance at this term of the court. Hillsville is the county seat of Carroll county, but is not on a railroad. The county is pierced by only two branch railroads, and as soon as the news of the murders reached Barren Springs, the nearest railroad station to Hillsville, the Governor immediately ordered the militia case the followers of the Allens should organize to resist the capture of those concerned in the shooting.

At the same time Gov. Mann offered the arrival of posses which were formed to pursue them.

The Allens have been trouble makers for a score of years and have often threatened Judge Massie for his severity in enforcing the laws.

When the news came to Judge Massie's home town, Pulaski, Va., a special train was made up at once and went to Barren Springs to fetch back the body of the Judge. Judge Thornton L. Massie was 48 years old. He was appointed to the bench by Gov. Swanson in 1908 and had been recently mentioned prominently as a candidate for the State Supreme Court. He is survived by a wife, two sons and a daughter.

One of Cap Hatfield's Nephews Gets Off With Light Verdict.

OCEANNA. W. Va., March 14.-Terrifled by the presence in the court room of over 100 members of the Hatfield clan, all of them armed, the jury in the case of the State of West Virginia against E. James Miller sentenced the prisoner to four years in the State Penitentiary.

The jury was afraid to bring in a more severe verdict because they had been threatened with death by relatives of Hatfield if they did so.

The killing was one of the most atrocious that has ever taken place in the mountains. Big Willis Hatfield, drunk and looking for trouble, requested Dr. Thornton, a prominent physician, to write him a prescription for whiskey, and on the refusal of the doctor to do so he drew his revolver and shot him through the heart.

This is the style of the car which will be used on the levitated transportation road if it ever gets going. On one of the railroad models was an aluminum skeleton car. It weighed eighteen pounds and by turning on a switch the car was raised about half an inch from the grooved rails upon which it had rested. There were no wheels to the car, but there were brushes connected by springs with the body of the car. As explained by Mr. Bachelet the brushes did not carry electricity, but ran in the groove of the rails and kept the car on the track. There was practically no friction, he said. At intervals along the model road were electro magnets. Each coil carried enough power to raise ten pounds, and there were eight coils in a section. Over the track was a solenoid which really is a magnet. Mr. Bachelet turned the power into the solenoid, which sucked the car to its mouth and then shot it through. The propulsion for his levinews was flashed to Gov. Mann. JUSTICE DAVIS TO TRY HIM, HYDE HEARS

He Did Not Expect That When He Withdrew His Appeal Last Week.

Wanted to Be Tried in March-Date Made April 1 by Justice Seabury.

HINT ABOUT RESISTING

That Justice Vernon M. Davis and not Justice Seabury is to sit at the trial of ex-Chamberlain Charles H. Hyde, which was set by Justice Seabury yesterday for April 1, was reported yesterday when motion was made in the Criminal Branch c. the Supreme Court to fix the date. Max D. Steuer wanted the trial in March and went so far as to ask Justice Seabury if he would be sitting in the Criminal Branch in April. Justice Seabury intimated that he did not think the inquiry a proper one. It is understood that he will sit in the Appellate Term in April. Mr. Hyde himself went a little further out of court. He gave out a long interview partly to show that he had never sought delay and partly to show that he was at least not seeking to be tried before Justice Davis, before whom William J. Cummins of the Carnegie Trust Company was convicted. Mr. Hyde is indicted for bribery in depositing city moneys in the Carnegie in return as alleged for favors from officials of that concern.

Among other things Mr. Hyde said that after Justice McCall had transferred the case from the Supreme Court to the General Sessions and the transfer had been upheld on appeal, he was about to move for trial when Justice Davis transferred the case back to the Supreme Court, where on November 6 he was still holding the April term, which he reopened on November 24 to sentence Cummins

Hyde, "selected that day to move to fix a day for my trial although the regular November term was in session. I would have been glad to go to trial on the day set, January 2, but when I found that Judge Davis was again assigned to the term after having held that term con-tinuously for nearly a year, I decided that I would follow the advice of counsel and friends, which had been pressed upon me for a long time, and move for a change of venue." Mr. Hyde's statement continues in part:

"But, Mr. Hyde, the change of venue partial jury could not be had, and your attorneys stated in court that there no question was raised regarding a Judge." "Yes, I know that. I am a lawyer my self and have practised at the New bar for nineteen years. I have great re-spect for the courts. I would not do any-thing or even hint that I would prefer one

"I do not know. Judge Ingraham granted the stay against me last summer at Bar Harbor, but he probably does not remember that, and it is hardly possible that the disposition of one case is of so much arrangement of the assignments. I should prefer to believe it entirely a coincidence "Will you be ready to go to trial on April

If I find that the District Attorney has had any real purpose in the course he has pursued I shall take any step necessary to forestall him. I still think there is a high sense of manliness and fair play in this community. "Mr. Hyde, do you care to say anything about your interview with Comptroller Prendergast?" "Yes. It takes a man to do than a year. Some harsh things had been said on both sides. His greeting was open, frank and manly, and I now regret that there ever was a misunderstanding. There are not many men in public life big enough to see things his way, however,

"Mr. Hyde, it has been suggested that you felt that Judge Davis had shown prejudice against you by compelling Mr. mins and Mr. Reichmann to testify proceedings against you before the Grand Jury under threat of commitment for con-tempt when those gentlemen were under indictment and pleaded their privilege under the United States constitution. Do you care to say anything about that?"

What I never coul understand was how the Grand Jury could find an indictment against me when both those gentlemen completely exonerated me from any wrongdoing and the only witness against me was a man who had confessed to looting a savings bank and had pleaded insanity, denied his parents, attempted suicide and was then engaged in selling perjury to the State in an attempt o escape from the penalty of his own crime It may surprise the people of this city to know that this same thief is daily enjoying the hospitality of the District Attorney, with whom he has an office, where he transacts his business with almost the same freedom as any other citizen of the com-

District Attorney Whitman said last night that he had nothing to do with the assignment of Judges and that so far as he knew the assignments for April have not yet been published and he does not know that Justice Davis is to sit in the Criminal Term. "I shall be glad to try the case before any Justice the Appellate Division assigns to the branch." Mr. Whitman added.

As for the motions last November, the District Attorney said they were made before the Justice before whom the Grand Jury had brought in the indictment against Hyde and who was holding court at the time. As for the indictment, Mr. Hyde had never moved to dismiss it or to inspect the minutes of the Grand Jury.

Says She Wouldn't Like to Cast a Ballot That Was Obtained Through

While delivering a lecture on "The Citizenship of Women" at the Hudson Theatre yesterday afternoon Miss Ethel Arnold, the English suffragist, was taken ill and led from the platform by H. R. Seaver of Columbia University, who had introduced her.

Miss Arnold had been suffering from an attack of ptomaine poisoning for four days and was forced to abandon a lecture at the Colony Club on Wednesday afternoon on account of it. She was taken to the wing of the theatre and sank into a chair exhausted. After several minutes she was assisted to a taxicab and taken to the home of her cousin, Mrs Frederick W. Whitridge, at 16 East Eleventh street, where she was attended later by Dr. Polk, under whose care she has been. It was said at the Whitridge home formatory. Kent in the that Miss Arnold had been poisoned by eating unwholesome oysters.

Dr. Polk said later that Miss Arnold was threatened with a slight attack of appendicitis. He thought that she would be all right in a few days and that no operation would be necessary.

Miss Arnold had delivered about half of her lecture when she became Several times she told the audience that she would have to cut her discourse short. She criticised English suffragettes that she would have to cut her discourse short. She criticised English suffragettes who are now in prison for window smashing. She said that in her former talks she had refrained from commenting on the different suffrage parties, but now she felt it was her duty to speak.

"Though out of sympathy with the militant movement I was full of admiration for Mrs. Pankhurst as a leader," she said, "but now my faith is shaken. I was not too trustful of the Liberal Government or even Lloyd George, but I think it would have been better to have waited to see the outcome before destroying $25,000 worth of property, most of which belonged to persons not concerned." Miss Arnold said this action had made untenable the position of a certain Cabinet Minister who two years ago predicted that woman's suffrage was bound to come; but since this outbreak he has been in despair.

"I am at a loss to understand this violence," said Miss Arnold, "but it may be that Mrs. Pankhurst had a reason. I was 3,000 miles away and do not know all of the circumstances."

Miss Arnold said personally that she was 3,000 miles away and do not know all of the circumstances."

Miss Arnold said personally that she preferred to have the settlement postponed and she would not care to record her vote and look back on the violence of the methods by which it was obtained. The English suffragist added that she had received many letters from persons who are breaking their connection with the party on account of the outbreak. In spite of it all she was confident that the women of England will get the ballot.

"When women vote they will be relieved from the tyranny of fashion, she said." The reason women wear hobble skirts is because they have nothing bigger to think about. They will also have a greater responsibility under the laws and there will not be so much smuggling. You cannot have a great body or mind without exercising it." he circumstances."

In answer to the assertion often made that women are incompetent to vote. Miss Arnold said the education they receive over the wash tub is better than that the husbands get in the street corner saleons.

Habeas Corpus to Dispose of Hart, Alleged Landlord of Diphtheria Germs.

Through a petition for a writ of habeas corpus signed yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Hendrick it developed that a number of prisoners sentenced in New York county to the Elmira Reformatory in the past few months have been found to have germs of various contagious diseases, and for this reason the reformatory refuses to accept them. The petition was submitted by Mrs. Bridget Hart of 340 East Seventieth street through her attorney, Willard F. degree on January 22 last and was sentenced to Elmira by Judge O'Sullivan, but is now held in the Tombs on the ground that he "has so-called bacteriological germs of diphtheria, although he is not sick, and as I am informed by Dr. McGuire, the Tombs physician, such germs may be present in any person."

Mrs. Hart contended that her son's detention at the Tombs is unwarranted and asks the court to direct Warden Fallon to send him to the reformatory.

Mr. Earp said yesterday that there is a law prohibiting penal institutions from receiving prisoners suffering from contagious or infectious diseases, but that last October the authorities at Elmira extended this law to cover persons carrying the germs of any such diseases. Since that time all persons sentenced here to Elmira have been examined by the assistant physician at the Tombs, and the cultures taken are examined in the Board of Health laboratory.

Mr. Earp said that the Board of Health reported that young Hart's cultures showed diphtheria germs, but that in the three months he has been in the Tombs he had showed no signs of diphtheria.

"If the boy really is in delicate condition he ought not to be kept in a little cell in the Tombs with another prisoner," said Mr. Earp, "where the disease will have every encouragement and he will be unable to throw off the germs. I said Mr. Earp, "where the disease will have every encouragement and he will be unable to throw off the germs. I am afraid he will get no credit for the period he has spent in the Tombs, and that is another reason why the matter is brought into the Supreme Court."

Mr. Earp said that Warden Fallon and Dr. McGuire are anxious to have the matter tested because there are other prisoners held for the same reason and the Tombs is overcrowded.
